Second Best: 100% of Financial Need Met With No Loans for Some Incomes

School	Financial Aid Notes
Bryn Mawr College	"Students with a total family income of less than $60,000 and total family assets of less than $500,000; for these students, 100% of demonstrated need, as calculated by the student's financial aid application, will be met with grants and work-study. Loans will no longer be used to meet need, and on average these students will see a $3,500 increase in their Bryn Mawr Grant eligibility."

Colgate University	Aid is loan-free if your parents' total income is less than $175,000 .
Cornell University	Aid is loan-free if your parents' total income is less than $60,000 and total assets are less than $100,000.
Dartmouth College	Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $65,000 . Your family will not be expected to make any financial contribution.
Duke University	Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $40,000 . Your family will not be expected to make any financial contribution.
Haverford College	Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $60,000 . Families making more than this threshold can expect small loans ranging from $1,500 to $3,000 a year.
Lafayette College	Aid is often loan-free if your parents earn less than $150,000 .
Lehigh University	90% of undergraduate families with an income less than $75,000 received grants and scholarships in an amount greater than the full cost of tuition.
Rice University	Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $200,000 . Students whose parents make less than $75,000 will receive coverage for tuition, fees, room, and board, whereas those whose parents make between $75,000 and $140,000 will receive full coverage for tuition only.
Tufts University	Aid is "typically" loan-free for students with total family incomes of less than $60,000. All other students qualifying for financial aid can expect to have a maximum of $7,000 in loans per year.

University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill	Low-income North Carolina students may qualify for aid without loans through the Carolina Covenant.
Vassar College	Aid is loan-free for students from "low-income families."
Washington University in St. Louis	Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $75,000 .
Wellesley College	Aid is loan-free if your calculated family contribution is less than $28,000 and your parents earn less than $100,000 per year. All other students qualifying for financial aid can expect to have a maximum of $15,200 in loans over four years.
Wesleyan University	"Domestic students from families who earn less than $120,000 (with typical assets) are offered a financial aid package with an additional $3,500 for freshmen, $4,500 for sophomores, $5,500 for juniors, and $5,500 for seniors in Wesleyan scholarship that replaces the standard loan package."
Williams College	Aid is loan-free if parents earn less than $75,000 with "typical assets." For everyone else, loans are capped at $4,000 per academic year.
